5. TYPES OF REMUNERATION TO THE FOREX COMPANY

5.1. For performing Transactions by Clients, the Forex Company may charge from the Clients the following types of remuneration: commission, swap, spread. Payment of remuneration to the Forex Company is made at the expense of the Client's margin security.

5.2. Swap is a payment for rolling an open position over to the next operating day. A swap can be positive or negative. The swap is set separately for long and short positions. Swap size depends on many factors, the main of which include: the current market interest rate on loans by central banks in national currencies, the dynamics of the price of the underlying asset in relation to which the Transaction is performed, the state of the forward market, the liquidity provider swap size. The Forex Company may unilaterally change the size of the swap and the procedure for its calculation with account of the current market situation, the liquidity provider swap size, its risk management policy, etc.

5.3. The swap amount is calculated when an open position is rolled over to the next trading day, and is accrued for payment and paid by the Client at the moment of the position closing.

5.4. Depending on the underlying asset, a triple swap is calculated from Wednesday to Sunday (if the underlying asset is a foreign currency or precious metals) and from Friday to Saturday. In other cases, when rolling positions over to the next trading day, the swap is charged for one day.

5.5. The swap is set as a percentage or in points. When setting the swap value in points, the swap amount is calculated using the following formula: Swap amount = Position volume, in lots * Swap size * Price of 1 tick.

5.6. The size of the swap, the method of its calculation and the day of accrual of a triple swap depend on the type of underlying asset for which the position is opened, are set on the Server of the Forex Company, are specified in the Forex Terminal in the "Specification" tab for each underlying asset (right-click on the name of the underlying asset in the "Market Overview" window and then run the "Specification" command) and are published on the Website of the Forex Company.

5.7. The swap amount that is not denominated in the currency of the Client's account is converted to the currency of the Client's account at the current exchange rate set in the Forex Terminal, based on MID quote at the time of the swap calculation. $MID\ quote = (Ask\ quote + Bid\ quote) / 2$.

5.8. $Spread = quote\ (price)\ of\ the\ demand\ (Ask)\ for\ the\ underlying\ asset - quote\ (price)\ of\ the\ offer\ (Bid)\ for\ the\ underlying\ asset$. Quotes (prices) for the underlying asset for the specified calculation are determined at the same moment of time.

5.9. Depending on the Client's price plan, the spread can be fixed and (or) floating. The type of spread depending on the Client's price plan is set in the parameters of the server of the Forex Company and is also specified on the website of the Forex Company. The spread size is displayed in the Forex Terminal, including when forwarding an order on fixing the price of the underlying asset at the time of opening a position, and is taken into account when determining the financial result of the Transaction at the moment of closing the position.

5.10. The Forex Company may unilaterally without prior notice to the Client to change the type and amount of spread used with respect to a specific underlying asset and (or) the price plan of the Client by placing information on it on the Website of the Forex Company (spread type) and (or) in the Forex Terminal (spread type and size). The changed Spread types and sizes are applied after they are posted in the Forex Terminal and (or) on the website of the Forex Company, in relation to newly opened positions of Clients only.

5.11. The commission calculation procedure depends on the type of underlying asset and the Client's price plan. The commission can be set in a fixed amount in the currency of the Client's account from the position volume (in lots), in points from the position volume in lots, as a percentage of the amount of the opened position, in a fixed amount per transaction. The amount of the position or its volume (number of lots) is determined by the Client when submitting an order on fixing the price of the underlying asset.

5.12. The commission is calculated using the following formulas:

5.12.1. when setting the commission in a fixed amount from the position volume in lots:
Commission amount = Volume in lots * Fixed amount of commission in the account currency;

5.12.2. when setting the commission in points from the position volume in lots:
Commission amount = Volume in lots * Commission amount in points * Tick price;

5.12.3. when setting the commission as a percentage of the amount of the opened position:
Commission amount = Position amount * Commission amount as a percentage, where Position amount = Volume in lots * Lot size in the units of measurement, if the underlying asset is a foreign currency, or Position amount = Volume in lots * Lot size * Quote at the moment of opening the position, if the underlying asset is precious metals, oil, securities, or stock index values;

5.12.4. when setting the commission in a fixed amount per transaction: Commission amount = Fixed amount of commission in the account's foreign currency for each Transaction regardless of the Transaction's size.

5.13. The commission amount and its calculation procedure, depending on the type of underlying asset and the Client's price plan, are published on the website of the Forex Company. For individual Clients, depending on the volume and (or) number of Transactions performed over a certain period of time, individual commissions, amounts of funds Pledged as margin security and other conditions may be set. Individual commission amounts are agreed with the Client separately.

5.14. The Forex Company may unilaterally change at its discretion the commission amounts by posting the changed commission amounts on the website of the Forex Company. The new commission amounts are applied after having been posted on the website of the Forex Company and in relation to newly opened positions of Clients only. If the commission calculation procedure is changed, the Forex Company notifies the Client on it not later than 10 calendar days before the changes take effect by posting the relevant information on the website of the Forex Company.

5.15. The commission for the Transaction, except for the cases specified in part two of this clause, is calculated automatically when the Client opens a position, it is displayed in the Forex Terminal in the "Trade" tab, the "Commission" column and is paid by the Client at the time of closing the position. Transactions with certain types of underlying assets may be subject to additional commission, which is calculated after the position is closed and debited from the Client's account not later than the next business day after the Transaction.

5.16. The commission amount is converted into the currency of the Client's account at the current exchange rate set in the Forex Terminal, based on the MID quote at the time of opening the position. $MID \text{ quote} = (\text{Ask quote} + \text{Bid quote}) / 2$.

5.17. The Forex Company reserves the right to charge a withdrawal fee of fifty (50) US dollars.

7.2. Data on the Client's orders on fixing the price of the underlying asset is stored on the server of the Forex Company.

8. PRINCIPLES OF EXECUTING ORDERS ON FIXING THE PRICE OF THE UNDERLYING ASSET AT THE BEST PRICE

8.1. Processing of Client's requests and orders made via Forex Terminal goes through the following stages: the Client makes a request or order that is checked for correctness in the Forex Terminal; the Forex Terminal sends a request or order to the server of the Forex Company; the Client's request or order is received at the server and is checked for correctness; a valid Client's request or order is placed in a queue sorted by time of receipt; the result of the Forex Company processing the Client's request or order is sent to the server; the server sends the result of processing the Client's request or order by the Forex Company to the Forex Terminal; the Forex Terminal receives the result of processing the Client's request or order by the Forex Company.

8.2. The accepted deferred orders on fixing the price of the underlying asset are considered valid indefinitely until they are cancelled by the Client, or executed, or closed due to insufficient margin security.

8.4. In respect of the Transactions of the Client, the Forex Company carries out their execution only, without providing trust management and without making recommendations.

8.5. At that, the Forex Company takes into account the following factors: current quotes received from liquidity providers; the corresponding underlying asset market liquidity; speed and probability of performing a transaction at this quote.

8.12. Execution of an order on fixing the price of the Client's underlying asset on the best terms for the Client at a given time does not mean execution of the order on fixing the price of the underlying asset at more favorable quotes than the quotes offered by other counterparties and participants of the OTC Forex market.

8.13. If there are open positions at the end of the trading day, the Forex Company unilaterally and without fail rolls them over to the next trading day. Open positions are rolled over to the next trading day with regard to all positions that were open at the end of the trading day.

Any deferred order on fixing the price of the underlying asset can be changed or cancelled by the Client if such an order has not become active (the quote of the underlying asset has not reached the level of its execution).

The closing of positions is stopped when these actions have led to an increase in the amount of unused margin security above the "Stop Out" level.

To avoid reaching the 'Margin Call' level and "Stop Out" level, the Client must maintain a sufficient level of margin security on their account.

The Company also may close the Client's open positions in the following cases:

if it is impossible to maintain an open position as a result of changes in legislation or if other reasons for closing the position emerge that are beyond the Company's control;

if the Client is denied service in accordance with the legislation of the republic of Belarus or in cases provided for by the Agreement.
